PENWAY PARK, Oct. 16.—With $30,000 at stake—the difference between the purses of the winning and losing teams—the Giants and Red Sox hooked up today in the eighth and deciding battle for the title of baseball championship of the world.

The sky was cloudless, the bright sun was chasing away the morning frost, and the strong wind died down just before game time. The Boston fans, feeling that the two straight victories of the Giants have backed the Red Sox against the wall, were eager and willing to lend encouragement. And that encouragement was evidenced first when the Bostonians trotted onto the field amid the frenzied plaudits of the assemblage.

GIANTS SING 'TESSIE.'

Some fans had been in their seats since early morning braving the cold, but heavy wraps so that they might get good seats to witness this final battle, which promises to eclipse all the others in thrilling and spectacular play.

The Giants came onto the field at 12:15 o'clock, lively and chipper, and caused gasps of amazement from the Boston fans by singing in chorus, "Tessie," the Red Sox battle song, one that McGraw has heretofore considered his particular jinx.

Red Sox Cheerful.

The field was in excellent shape, the infield had been sprinkled an hour before game time to settle the dust, which blew into the eyes of the infield yesterday, causing much annoyance and delay in the game. The runner's dilemma of the Red Sox found a denial in the attitude of the home team during practice. They seemed much more at ease in the attitude of the home team during practice. The Game Play by Play

FIRST INNING.

Giants.—Bedient and Wood warmed up for Boston. McGraw and Marquand, Devore and Mathewson at work. Klem manager announced his choice with a minute before play started. Then they selected the men for the newspapers, picked them yesterday afternoon—Bedient for Boston, and Mathewson for New York.

Bedient started by slipping over a pathing strike on Devore. Then he drilled a two balls outside the plate. The next he curved squarely over the rubber. Bedient next served up a ball which was outside, and both pitcher and batter were in a hole. Devore hit the ball into a slow bound ten yards inside third base. Wagner had judged the pitch perfectly. He hardly moved out of his tracks to get the bound, and threw Devore out at first. Bedient played Devore the same way. He almost caught him with three balls and a strike when the ball hit Wagner. Bedient is clearly on the third base at three. Doyle out at first.

Bedient played Snodgrass as he had the first two batters. He refused to let Doyle into the trap into which Joe Wood fell yesterday by putting them over the regularly. But Snodgrass waited them out and took first on balls. Murray took a foul strike and a ball when Snodgrass made a desperate bid for second base. Doyle's throw was a beauty. The ball hit Snodgrass by ten feet. It went directly into Wagner's hands, but Heile did the unexpected. He muffed the ball and the runner was safe. Murray was forced to hit and he drove the ball on the ground between second and third. Gardner took it on the run and threw the batter out at first.

RED SOX. NO HITS.

Red Sox.—The Sox started out to walk at the first ball pitched as the Giants did yesterday. But they did not have the same luck. Hooper waited them out and took first on balls. Hooper bunted the first one straight up to the plate, but he hit it too hard and Merkle took it at first base on the first bound. Merkle batted for Hooper and Hooper was an easy out. Yerkes pushed on the first ball. He swung at it, but missed the next three and was out on strikes.

Hooper struck the first ball batted to him. It shot fast on the ground halfway between Merkle and Doyle, and was a clean base hit. Speaker made a daring attempt to stretch the hit. He stepped out and top speed for second base. Devore's throw in the hole hit him and he was out.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 16.—John Schrank, the man who shot Theodore Roosevelt, is legally sane, according to a statement by District Attorney Winifred C. Zabel today.

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—All plans for an operation upon Colonel Roosevelt to remove the bullet fired into his body by John Schrank at Milwaukee, Monday evening, were abandoned temporarily by his physicians today. He showed continued improvement at Mercy Hospital after getting a good night's rest. The physicians decided no immediate operation was necessary and summed up the Colonel's condition thus: "General condition excellent."

They decided to let nature take its course and await developments, calling a conference for later in the day for a decision on further action.

COLONEL "MIGHTY GLAD" TO SEE WIFE.

Mrs. Roosevelt arrived today from which fits in the Colonel's chest will New York with her daughter Elsie and never be removed unless infection develops. Dr. Terrell was, as he says, in that case the wound will be covered by "mighty glad" to see her, the bullet removed and drainage and she took up her quarters in a room pipes bawled. The absence of fever tonight to that which he will occupy until day indicated there was little danger of the abominable great him paralysis to infection.

Dr. Terrell announced at noon that the Colonel's wound would not be probed today. It showed the Colonel's condition was nearly normal.

'WANTED TO DIE WITH BOOTS ON'---T. R.

Colonel Tells Why He Insisted on Speaking After Being Shot.

John E. Pratt, who has traveled with Colonel Roosevelt constantly for months, as the representative of the Harvard papers, presents the first interview with Colonel Roosevelt after the latter had been removed to the hospital.

By JOHN E. PRATT.

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—Anyway, if I had to die, I wanted to die with my boots on.

Lying on a hospital bed which was completely filled by his great bulk, Theodore Roosevelt made this answer to a question by Dr. Terrell.

He had just talked with the newspaper men who were with him at the scene of the shooting, and at the conclusion of the conversation, expressed the fear that the President was exerting himself beyond his strength.

"You do too much," said Terrell. "The most uncomfortable hour I ever spent in my life was while I sat on that platform in Milwaukee wondering where that bullet was and how imminent danger you were. How could you be so fatigued as to make a speech then? It was all very well for you to say the hurt was not fatal, but how could you be sure?"

"With My Boots on."

The Colonel grinned and raised his arm heavily, trying not to show the pain that came with every movement. He replied: "I didn't think the wound was dangerous. I was confident that it was not in a place where much harm could follow, and therefore I wished to make the speech. Anyway, even if it went against me—well, if I had to die, I thought I'd rather die with my boots on."

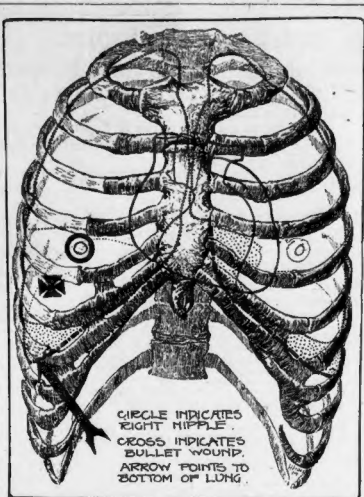

The newspaper men who were with him when, out of the darkness, came the bullet that still makes his life, felt that in that instance he had optimized his life's utterance.

Now, once since last night has he wavered in courage. Physically overcome, he more and more came as near to fainting as so strong a man can. All the rest of the time he has been as serene as a man unborn.

It was in the gray of this morning's daylight that we caught our first glimpse of him after the shooting.

The Old Warrior.

Standing in the corridor of his private room, as he lay in the Northwestern-His-tion in Chicago, we heard Dr. Terrell say: "Now is the chance to see the old warrior, he is coming out."

The door of his stateroom creaked and swung open slowly. As it swung back, within loomed the figure that attracts attention everywhere.

The Colonel stepped out slowly, his shoulders thrown back and his bearing as military as when he is on parade. He stretched out two fingers to one of the staff.

"Ah, old comrade," he said, "welcome."

"The newspaper boys are my friends," he added, as he proceeded toward the door of the room. "You glad to see them?"

"You had a pretty rough time last night, Colonel," suggested somebody. "We had a middling lively time."

BOSTON SURGEON EXPLAINS WHY CASE IS ENCOURAGING

One of the leading surgeons in New England has given to the Boston American the following remarkably lucid and graphic description of the bullet wound sustained by Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, of the chances of his recovery and of the portion of the anatomy of the victim affected by the wound.

The surgeon said: "From the description as to the respiration, etc. it is plain that there is an expectation or anything to indicate lung involvement. I look for Colonel Roosevelt's recovery and I give my reasons why I do so."

It is plain, even to the lay mind, that bullet in no way perforated the lung. Yet see Colonel Roosevelt made a speech to a great audience after the shooting and there was no expectation of spitting of blood during the effort. Dr. McKinley, who is in charge of this case, was president of the American Medical Society last year.

He is easily the most prominent surgeon in the United States. Under his skillful direction, and with the care the wounded man is undoubtedly receiving, added to his own splendid physique, there is no question in my mind of his recovery; good care and sepsis will pull him through.

There is no comparison between the case of Colonel Roosevelt and the wound sustained by President McKinley. The McKinley wound perforated both walls of the stomach and the head of the pancreas.

Injury to the pancreas inevitably involves the greatest of dangers because of its position, or, does the pancreas, and this dead tissue is hard to remove, unless the removal is immediately performed.

The pancreas when injured, according to the latest scientific idea, di-didn't we?" said the Colonel, with a broad grin.

"Pretty plucky of you," said another man. "Everybody agrees to that."

"Plucky? Fiddlesticks!"

"Plucky!" said the Colonel, and stepped out on the platform and waved the steps.

He had indignantly refused a stretcher and even balked at an ambulance, but finally agreed that this was the best means of conveyance to the hospital.

He walked past a silent crowd, a crowd that wanted to cheer but did not dare, and stood without a sign of weariness. He then all he waved a hand, just as he was leaving the steps a flashlight flashed forth, the sharp report of the power starting everybody.

"Ah, shot again," said the Colonel without a tremor.

Before climbing into the ambulance he turned to the newspaper men who had come out to see him off.

To See Newspaper Men.

"I want to see you newspaper men at the hospital at 9 o'clock. I want all the old guard there."

Then he started up the steps with a firm step, and tried to get to the top of the platform, but had counted on more strength than he possessed.

With a gasping exclamation, he sank back among them, his head dropping and his figure pathetically helpless.

As the Colonel was being hurried through the streets, which were beginning to show the activity of a Chicago day, no one stopped to watch this passing ambulance. Few guessed whom he held as a passenger. Two surgeons, Dr. John B. Murphy and Dr. Arthur D. Heran had met the wounded man at the station and went with him on his early morning ride. They reached the hospital at 6:30 a. m. and the Colonel called for breakfast.

Chance of Infection.

In all such cases there is always present the remote possibility of infection. Tetanus, or lockjaw, is the greatest danger because small particles of clothing or dirt which contained tetanus bacilli might have been on the bullet, struck, and carried into the wound.

But care and treatment, such as Dr. Murphy will administer, will wholly obviate this chance. Promptly antitoxin serum will be given to forestall this greatest danger.

This serum, when given promptly, acts almost with certainty.

BOSTON FINANCIAL NEWS BRIEFS

An official of the Boston Bell Telephone Company states the business of the company has shown remarkable improvement in the past few years, reducing the charge for the better in business generally throughout the country.

The company was fortunate in having practically no stock of rubber on hand when prices started on a recent sharp decline, and the management is now in a position to stock up at present low prices.

Stockholders of the Mayflower and Old Colony companies are becoming impatient at the delay in shaft sinking on the ground that drilling has served its purpose of establishing a substantial loss of copper and that as the drills have already given sufficient data as to the formation for shaft sinking, further drilling is only delaying the making of a mine.

The Boston & Superior Company is not now doing any mining, but the contractor is working as usual and will continue in connection as there is sufficient ore on the stockpile to keep the mill going for several months. The reason for the suspension of mining operations is that a new shaft of a depth of 8,500 feet.

From the annual report of the Great Eastern Copper Company, it appears that the company has made a most successful year, and that the company has made a most successful year, and that the company has made a most successful year.

"—AND THEN SOME!"

By MORTON BIRGE.

SAY, Mister, please tell me—excuse me—I'm kind of confused in my head, there's something gone wrong and I ain't very strong. I sorter fell out of the bed. Oh, yes—it was this—I remember—a part of it seems to come back, I rode without fear for the way was all clear—and then the darn train left the track.

Oh, maybe, that's not it exactly—I guess I'm mixed up pretty bad—My automobile shed a part of a wheel—Say, isn't a tidal wave sad? Now, Mister, I guess I am twisted—but wait just a bit—Yes, I mean To say that I fell in a forty-foot well. Who started that mowing machine?

There, thank you much—yes, now I'm better. How sweetly the little birds sing? And see the trees dance—and the ducks in long pants—so softly the wedding bells ring! And I—tell me twice—I can bear it—Am I left all alone in the world? I saw heads go past in the midst of the blast and one was all dimpled and curled.

Ah, yes!—it is now I remember—a game—that was it—I was there. I heard a clear call from the umpire: "Play ball!" and then—Oh, I'm faint—give me air! They put him away to be treated and later they learned that his name is "A BOSTON FAN"—He's the wreck of a man who saw that unfortunate game.

There's At Least One More Chance To Get The Money

Unless there is another nerve-racking tie, the game today furnishes the last opportunities to land the $250 hits on the Everybody's Magazine board on Duffy's Cliff at Fenway Park, and to "Smash the System's Slate" for $1000.

Any batter who hasn't developed writers' cramp from his journalistic work has a chance to win the prizes offered by

THOMAS W. LAWSON

The sign is 34 feet long and 21 feet high, and any man in a World's Series game who raps the ball to any part of it will win $250. The FIRST batter who hits the big slate will win $1000. The following well-known baseball writers, L. R. Murdoch, Boston American; Paul H. Shannon, Boston Post; Herman Nickerson, Boston Journal; T. H. Murnane, Boston Globe, and R. E. McMillin, Boston Herald, will act as judges.

There are plenty of Red Sox and Giants who can "smash" the slate. And there are plenty—aye, millions of everyday citizens in all walks of life who, if they will, can apply and "smash the System's slate," which in plain Lawson-simplified English spells "HIGH-COST LIVING."

"THE REMEDY"

"Checkers" Killed as Somerville Fire Horses Hit Pillar

"Checkers," the middle horse to the left which hauled engine 1 of the Somerville Department, was killed early today when the three horses, hauled from their engine, bolted and ran heading into an elevated railway pillar at Main street and Broadway.

Early 1 had responded to an alarm for a fire in Walsh, Dwyer & Gray's carriage shop at No. 38 Myrtle avenue. The horses were taken from the engine and were standing at one side of the road. Suddenly they bolted down Myrtle avenue, into Main street and as far as Broadway. There the outside steeds started to dash other side of the square iron pillars which support the elevated structure.

The bolted "Checkers," in the lead of the pile, was smashed into the fat of the pillar. He reared in injuries which caused instant death.

The horse bristled in the carriage shop, having his supplies of paint to feed on. The two and one-half story structure was burned out and much stock was destroyed at a total loss of $40,000, partly insured. Horsemen's combination is given as the cause.

Fireman James E. Phillips, who gave the alarm, Frank Howard and Frank Neen, night watchmen and fire master in the Boston & Maine freight yard nearby, saved several carriages.

Steffens Proposes 'Bill' Haywood as Harvard Professor

"Big Bill" Haywood, the I. W. W. leader, would make a good professor of philosophy at Harvard, according to Lincoln Steffens, the author and lecturer, who addressed 200 Harvard students in Emerson Hall.

The Harvard faculty is all wrong, he said. "Get the professors to tell you only what they know and not a lot about which they do not know," he declared. "If you did this you would clean out a good part of the faculty."

"There is something fundamentally wrong with education as it is here at Harvard today. This is proved by the fact that when a student comes out of college he cannot be numbered among our best citizens. The reason is that there is no self-government in the universities among the students."

Here at Harvard President Eliot used to trust the students more freely in their choice of studies, but this is being all changed now.

"Bill Haywood and his crowd are the only real devoted students that the working people of this country have."

"You body of students ought to hear the philosophy from Bill Haywood. Our government is not a real government at all. It is the rule of a man or group who rule all."

HARVARD STUDENTS TO HAVE LARGEST LIBRARY OF MUSIC

Music students in Harvard are soon to enjoy the use of the largest library of music of any university in America. Miss Rebecca Cox, the sister of Miss Albee Cox, a noted musical critic and writer, has generously donated her large and valuable collection of musical books to Harvard University.

These include not merely technical works, but autograph copies of scores by Wagner, Beethoven and Mozart, and likewise contain many valuable editions. A special part of the new Widener Library is to be reserved for these, which will be kept apart as the "Crawford collection."

Miss Crawford made the arrangements when she came to Harvard last June from her home in Brooklyn, N. Y., and conferred with Professor A. G. Spaulding of the music department and Professor Archibald Cary Coolidge, the trustee in charge of the library.

She failed to state any of the accusations which were made by her husband after his tongue had been silenced by the bullets of the assassins on July 16. After a short examination by Assistant Prosecutor George E. Ladd, the jury went to the defense for cross-examination.

"The State rested when John F. HIT BY ENGINE, WALKS AWAY

John Donahue, sixty-eight, proprietor of a tailor shop in Malden Square, was hit by a locomotive today, was buried twenty feet, but was unhurt except as to his clothes and his feelings.

He was on his way to the Ferry and was crossing in Malden, of the Boston & Maine's Saugus branch. He was struck by the engine of an inbound suburban passenger train at 8:41.

When the freight car hit Mr. Donahue, he landed in a heap on the ground, picked himself up and shook his fist at the engineer, who had just managed to stop his train.

Then the indignant tailor started to walk along to his shop. Missusette, someone sent in a police call and the ambulance came clanging to the crossting looking for the injured man.

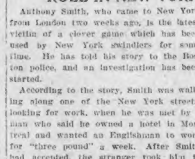

When they found the man, the ambulance driver told the policeman, "The fellow is a specimen to the ambulance driver, pointing at Donahue who was striding along, brandishing his clothes. The ambulance driver whipped up his head and said, 'You mean you're a specimen?'"

"Come to the hospital," said the driver, and drove to Donahue.

"Well, come to the police station and let the doctor look you over," they said not wishing to make the run for nothing.

Donahue compromised on this, made the station, was examined by Dr. Charles D. McCarthy and couldn't show a scratch.

Greater Kennedy's Opens Today

YOU are invited to visit and inspect the largest clothing store in the East, and the largest single-floor men's store in the world. It is the most modern—though not the most expensively equipped—store of its kind in the United States. All merchandise, from Overcoats to Collar-buttons, is under plate glass—easy to see and get at, yet protected from Just, dirt and finger marks. And while in everything we have done, Utility and Efficiency have been the first and greatest considerations, the finished result is as pleasing in its appearance as in its better, quicker service.

BUT the equipment and appearance of this Great, Live Store are but side issues compared with the tremendous stock of Good Clothes, the remarkable variety of styles and the wide range of patterns you will find here.

For with the opening of the Greater Kennedy's, we are ready with the greatest stock of fine clothing ever gathered together under one roof—in Boston or any other city, and the crystal glass wardrobes make this immense stock visible almost at a glance.

NO store ever before attempted to gather together such a multiplicity of styles—both English and American—as we show here. Nor could any one mind possibly conceive, nor any one tailoring establishment produce, such a variety of ideas.

Here we show, in almost limitless quantities, the best products of more than a dozen of America's leading tailors. Big spot-cash buying, low Summer Street rent and economical management allow us to quote on this kind of merchandise lower prices than anyone else, anywhere, always.

So when you come to take your first look at this vast and modern establishment, don't let its striking appearance blind your eyes to the even more wonderful sight presented by our larger stocks and greater values. The whole affords a spectacle such as New England has never before been privileged to witness.

Harvard Second Team to See Sox Play

The Harvard second team will witness the deciding World Series game at Fenway Park and all because they carried the ball from the middle of the field to the variety's ten-yard line. Coach Houghton dropped the play and pounced the men here of the second team that if they put the ball over he would take them to the World Series game today. The second team made good and will all around the game. The second team backed the variety for a long time and a few minutes later carrying the ball down to the goal line after the kick. The variety seemed to be on top, finishing all the time.

TUFTS TO PLAY CLEAN TODAY

Tufts will meet the football team of Dean Academy this afternoon on the Oval as part of the preliminary practice for the game with Bowdoin on Saturday. On account of the poor showing of the team against New Hampshire last Saturday, Coach Wadsworth has decided to put the men through some stiff work. Special stress will be laid on the defensive work and the handling of the forward pass.

EXPECT BARTLETT TO BE FOOTBALL STAR

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 16.—(Herald.) The Brown coaches are paying much attention to Bartlett, the big candidate for a backfield position. Bartlett is a big, powerful player who has a wonderful play in the line and he will be drilled to all points of the game. The variety was given another hard work out under Coach Pryor. Why $16?

Instead of experimenting as to how little could be put into our lowest priced suit we went to all lengths to determine how much we could put into it. And having determined the equation of quality the price fixed itself automatically at the lowest figure possible for such quality. That figure was and is $16.

The President's Great Speech For the Navy

Speeches like this rouse every citizen to new pride and loyalty to his country, and to new respect and confidence in the Chief Executive of the Republic.

Better Starve the MEN Instead. That Would Give Quicker Results

That was all very well in the old days, before better weapons had been found. The old days have gone. The new method is to make the OTHER individual starve, and that is what the British women should do.

Love for her child is all that fills
The brooding mother heart,
And in the heart so brimmed with love
Self cannot play a part.

Selling Lunches.

If you live near a shoe factory and are anxious to earn money, I will tell you just how I made a good sum.

May never be printed again, but I am thinking that it will live long in the minds of many of you who have read it. You will not soon forget. This girl has shown too much courage, too much perseverance too much of all the qualities the world admires for any of you to which he gladly granted.

Each morning about 9:30 I used to go to the shop with sandwiches made from bread sliced thin and spread with deviled ham. I also had a jar of French mustard in a corner of my basket, to use, if needed.

I like the ideal toward which she has been working. In it there is nothing selfish. Perhaps I shouldn't say that. Perhaps I should say that in it is a divine selfishness. She is earning money so that she may some day see her little sister who is many miles away. She doesn't know

And she has already saved $18.50! What a fortune in the bank! What wonderful riches in the body and brain of the little girl herself. It is the human wealth that teaches me. It is the human wealth that will touch you.

I am wondering if tears will not sort of crowd the merriment out of your eyes.

AN ALTERNATIVE

By A. G. CHITTICK

MEATS have gone up and continue to rise, in spite of our protests, in spite of our cries: Still they soar higher—to our surprise— But there're capital things in the fish market!

The butcher's accounts fill our souls with dismay,
As we must continue to live day by day.
For endurance to do so we earnestly pray—
But there're capital things in the fish market!

Cold storage chickens in plenty abound,
And much ptomaine poison is going around;
To be sure a few fresh eggs are now to be found—
But, there're capital things in the fish market!

Good-bye to the butcher, good-bye to the hen.
Good-bye till the prices snail come down again.
Just imagine it's Lent, O Ye Children of Mea—
For there's capital things in the fish market!

Good-bye to the bullock, thrice welcome the eel,
Good-bye to the sheep, and the pig with its squeal;
The bass and the bluesh will make a good meal—
Yes, there're capital things in the fish market!

Oh! Cruel Awakening!
